

Dear Edna: Well my grandson John William (Bill) Burgess married a lovely girl in Georgia and now they are back in U. of Corpus Christi in a little flat and Jean attended school with him. She had never been to College but after High School had a Secretary's job so I think they will make a nice couple, each being helpful to the other. I write her that maybe now I could locate Floy and then she, Jean, could tell me how Floy could reach her. It was sure sad about dear Mrs. A's passing away. You'll have to write Helen some news occasionally. Also tell us about your mother and Nancy. Bill Jarvis left me there is a new grandchild. Also about your birthday time to dinner - sent her a sweet letter. Love Aunt Allene

Postcard from Allene Beaumont Burgess (Mrs. Duke Burgess) to her niece Edna Deckler. Postmarked September 30, 1957, Sacramento, CA

Among Arlington Heights' "horse and buggy days" pioneers and their descendants who attended an informal picnic recently at the home of Mrs. M. R. Sanguinett, 4729 Collinwood, were, front row, left to right, Mrs. Boyd Tucker, Mrs. T. E. D. Hackney

and Miss Charlie Mattison; second row, left to right, Miss Ida Bunting and Mes. Lillie B. Hovencamp, Sanguinet, Stuart Harrison, C. S. Mattison, Cass Edwards and Duke Burgess, and standing, left, H. A. Judd and, right, Robert McCart.

Judge to Be Memorialized Had Connections in Texas

Memorial services will be held Dec. 6 in California for a federal judge whose roots reached deep into Fort Worth and Texas.

Judge Campbell E. Beaumont, 71, died Nov. 19 in Fresno. He was federal district judge there.

The judge began his legal career in Fort Worth in the 1900s.

He practiced law here for two years before going to Fresno in 1910. He was associated here with C. K. Goree, P. T. Lomax and Frank Wren, railroad attorneys.

Related to Worthams.

Judge Beaumont's family connection with Fort Worth, however, goes back to the last century—to the Worthams.

The judge's maternal grandparents were Mr. and Mrs. David Wortham. David Wortham and Fort Worth's Louis J. Wortham were second cousins.

Louis J. Wortham played a leading role in Fort Worth's development. When the Fort Worth Star was founded in 1906 he was its first editor. He later became president of the paper and when the Star was combined with the Telegram in 1909, he was made vice president and editor of the Star-Telegram. He later became president.

Though Judge Beaumont spent only two years of his life here, he left in Fort Worth many relatives.

Nephew of Mrs. Kemble.

Among these were the Kembles. The judge's aunt was married to Judge A. A. Kemble of Waxahachie, and many of the Kembles' offspring came to Fort Worth.

Judge Beaumont remained in close contact throughout his life with his relatives here. Last year he was a visitor here.

George C. Kemble, Fort Worth lawyer, gave a luncheon at the Fort Worth Club for Judge Beaumont.

The judge also had a nephew here, Dr. I. L. Van Zandt.

Judge Beaumont's sister, Mrs. Duke Burgess, also formerly lived in Fort Worth. Her husband was a member of an old Tarrant County family. Mrs. Burgess now lives in Sacramento, Cal.

Another sister of Judge Beaumont, Mrs. D. L. Evans, lives in Big Spring.

Born in Kentucky.

The judge himself was born in Mayfield, Ky. He went to college at Kentucky State University and graduated from law school at Cumberland University, Lebanon, Tenn.

Judge Beaumont served on California's superior court bench from 1921 to 1939. In 1939 President Roosevelt appointed him a federal district judge.

The judge was buried in Fresno Nov. 22. The memorial service, conducted by federal judges, will be held in the Fresno Federal Building.

Judge Campbell E. Beaumont is the brother of Allene Beaumont Burgess, Mrs. Duke Burgess