

VAN ZANDT JARVIS HELPS CONSTABLE IN GAMBLING RAID

Van Zandt Jarvis, foreman of the Seventeenth district grand jury, and Constable Tol Johnson were schoolmates in Fort Worth a good many years ago. Moreover, they used to go "coon huntin'" together. That is how it happened that Jarvis took part in a gambling raid on concessions at the stock show Monday.

Johnson had noticed a number of slightly disguised roulette wheels in operation and was studying the situation when Jarvis came along. Many boys were playing and large sums were being wagered by older visitors.

"It's a clear violation of the law," Johnson said. "I believe I'll pinch 'em."

"You're right about the violation and I'll help you round them up," Jarvis asserted. Deputy Constables Miller and Nevans and two deputy sheriffs were enlisted. Five arrests were made and all entered pleas of guilty.
